WHO WANTS A CHANGE?

All the interests of the people of the Ninth Congressional District are identified with the success and continuance of the policy of the Republican party. The past twenty-four years have brought wonderful changes in the industrial and business conditions of this section. They have witnessed a partial development of our great wealth in minerals and timber, and have made agriculture as profitable as it can be found anywhere in the Union. Since 1880 there have been four Republican and two Democratic administrations in this country—in all fifteen years of Republican rule and eight years of Democratic rule.

The business men of the Ninth District who have lived and worked through the last twenty years know from actual experience when they have had their seasons of good times and when their bad times. It is unnecessary for us to draw a comparison between the conditions that prevailed under Mr. Cleveland's last administration and those that have come and continued since Mr. McKinley was elected in 1896.

Which class of our people wish to return to what has been known as Cleveland times? Who would be willing to take the risk of having another such period of depression as was seen from 1893 to 1897? The men who have been investing their capital in this section and developing the vast mineral resources surely do not want a recurrence of hard times. It is reasonable to conclude that the laboring men who have been profitably employed for the past seven years do not wish to return to idleness and suffering. They can well remember how their families were made destitute and their children and wives suffered for the necessities of life. Is it possible that the farmers are so indifferent to their interests that they are willing to take any chances for changing the present conditions? Have they gotten tired of the good markets and the fine prices they have been receiving for their products? Do they wish to sell their wheat for sixty cents and their corn for thirty or forty cents a bushel as they did in 1897? Do they want wool to go back to ten or twelve cents a pound and the sheep industry to be ruined as it was under the Wilson-Gorman tariff law? These are questions that should receive careful consideration from the voters of the Ninth District. The Richmond Times-Dispatch in its issue of the 15th inst., writing about "Politics and Business" says:

"The Republican party is a business organization and therefore deals largely with materialism. In this campaign as in other campaigns of the past it appeals to the greed and selfishness of the voters. It tells them under Republican rule the country is prosperous and that it would be poor business to make a change in the administration of public affairs because such a change might disturb business and check prosperity."

Our Richmond contemporary says this: "is a cunning plan," but does not, because it cannot, dispute the right of the Republican party to make the plea and its ability to sustain it. The Times-Dispatch declares that "material prosperity is sweet" and that "commercialism makes us a rich and powerful nation and enables us to maintain our institutions." But our contemporary tries to reflect upon the Republican party by saying: "We deny that it is the main purpose of government to promote material prosperity. The function of government is to establish liberty to protect men in their individual rights, to promote public morals and to maintain justice."

Has not the party of Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, McKinley and Roosevelt filled all these requirements more courageously and successfully than any political organization the world has ever known? It has been a patriotic, a liberty-loving party; and because it is a business party it does not justify the charge made by the Times-Dispatch that its plea for prosperity "is base and debasing."

Here in the Southwest our people want a continuance of prosperity. They want no change in business conditions. This desire on their part is not "base and debasing."

COL. SLEMP AS REPRESENTATIVE.

Mr. Weyer, the Democratic candidate for Congress in this district, has done himself no credit or good by his effort to belittle Colonel Slemp as a capable representative of the people. The attempt to depreciate Colonel Slemp has tended rather to depreciate Mr. Weyer, for it has brought about a comparison of the representative qualities of the two candidates.

Colonel Slemp represented the people of the great county of Lee in the House of Delegates in 1879-80 with so much fidelity and ability that they elected him again by a largely increased majority as their representative in the Legislature of 1881-2. He played an important part in the General Assembly as a steadfast advocate of a readjustment of the public debt of Virginia and defender of the public free schools, whose existence was threatened to be destroyed by the party of which Mr. Weyer is now the candidate and of which he was then a follower.

In 1902 Colonel Slemp was elected to Congress by the people of the Ninth District. He became at the first session of Congress an active and efficient worker. As a rule no member of Congress at his first session accomplishes much for his constituents. Our representative, however, broke that rule. He secured more for his district and people at his first term than any man who has represented the district since the war did at two or even four terms. It is useless to recount what Colonel Slemp has done for the district, but it is enough to secure even from the Democrats an acknowledgment that he has been a most industrious and capable representative. We have heard Democrats, who are proud of their record, declare their purpose to vote for him at the coming election because he has done so much for the district.

Mr. Weyer does not stand so well with the people in a representative capacity. He was a member of the late Constitutional Convention, representing the counties of Pulaski and Giles. Though a member of the suffrage committee of that body, he failed to make enough impression upon it to secure the adoption of his views on any important measure. He spoke frequently and brilliantly, no doubt, but his speaking was in vain. After failing to secure a fair suffrage law for the people of the Ninth District, he goes upon the stump and defends the iniquitous provisions that have so greatly wronged the people he wishes to represent in Congress. Mr. Weyer's failure to get anything fair and good for the people of the district and his reckless assaults upon the white men who have been disfranchised by the new Constitution prove him anything but a safe man to send to Congress. By comparison with Colonel Slemp he is bound to suffer in the esteem of the people.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch says: "Not only does Mr. Roosevelt believe, but he truthfully boasts, that his party is the only one within whose keeping the welfare of the country is safe." The Times-Dispatch thought the same way when it refused to support Bryan. It ought to think so now, as it recently declared that the Democratic party was made up of "a disorganized mass of humanity" representing all the political ills known in this country, except Republicanism. Is the welfare of the country safe in the hands of such a party as the Democratic?

President Roosevelt has published his letter of acceptance, and very naturally it does not please the Democrats. It contains too much solid truth to suit them. It is among the best papers ever prepared by any man who has occupied the Presidential chair. Republicans are delighted with it. They were expecting something good, and it is much better than they anticipated. The letter should be sent out by the million as a campaign document.

If you have not registered, do so without delay. You can register on any day from now until the 8th of October. That will be the last day. Hunt up the registrar and have your name put on the books. There is no wisdom in waiting until the last day.

New Jersey's Pigeon Law.
Newark Advertiser.
Again New Jersey is threatened with, or promised, a formal test of the constitutionality of the act prohibiting the shooting of five pigeons from a trap, "backed," we are informed, "by the influence of the Riverton Gun Club, the largest and most influential organization of its kind in the State." We do not know what point in the law the Riverton Gun Club considers vulnerable, but there is no apprehension that it will be found defective. Similar laws are in force in other States and have not been upset. But there is one point that the Philadelphia "sportsmen" had better make up their minds to at the start. That is that if, on the strength of throwing the act into court they calculate its slow way up to the Court of Errors and Appeals, they will reckon without their host. The law carries imprisonment as a penalty in addition to a fine. Some of the Philadelphia society "sportsmen" will be kept busy getting out of jail if they try to run the pigeon abattoir again.

Parker Organs Despondent.
Brooklyn Eagle (Dem.).
The "World" pictures Parker as asleep in the shadow of a haystack, undisturbed by a flash of lightning from Vermont. The "Times" is clearly apprehensive. It declares that "something must be said and 'something must be done to convince the independent voters that the country will gain by a change at Washington.' Other newspapers, equally ardent in their advocacy of Judge Parker, give expression to views identical in tone if not in phraseology. To say that all this is not sufficiently ominous would be more than sufficiently fatuous.

A MATTER OF HEALTH

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S LETTER.

Philadelphia Press.
President Roosevelt's letter of acceptance is a powerful and commanding production. As an intellectual performance it is one of the best he ever did, and takes high rank among the masterpieces of American political literature. Whether regarded as a political polemic or as an elevated State paper it is equally admirable. If we are attracted by its controversial ability we are not less pleased with its breadth of discussion and its loftiness of tone. The whole argument of the Republican campaign, offensive and defensive, is compressed within its searching and comprehensive pages. In every part it shows the insight of the thinker and the grasp and decision of the leader.

At the very outset the President stands forth as a political gladiator. He is aggressive, penetrating and confident. He is as relentless in showing up the contradictions and incoherence of the opposition as he is in exposing the hollowness of its objections to Republican administration. With cutting truth he remarks: "It is not unfair to say that having abandoned most of the principles upon which they have insisted during the last eight years, they now seem at a loss both as to what it is that they really believe and as to how firmly they shall assert their belief in anything." In contrast "we do not have to guess at our own convictions and then correct the guess if it seems unpopular." With such keen epigrams the President lays bare the weak and uncertain attitude of the opposition. The Administration, on the other hand, has shown its strength as much in meeting unexpected emergencies as in dealing with the problems that were anticipated. The President confidently reads the appeal on an unimpeachable record.

Having shown the contrast between the general flabbiness of the one side and the strength and rectitude of the other, the President proceeds to particular questions. The opposition cannot criticize without misrepresenting. Panama is a case in point. The President crystallizes the whole issue in a few telling sentences, and his vindication will silence captiousness. He vigorously grapples with every misadventure on his action on foreign matters, and in a series of striking and pungent questions he sets forth at once a brilliant record and beneficent activity and the futility of objections. These passages constitute a fine example of rhetorical exposition and argument. Every sentence is a snapper and cuts to the quick.

The President avoids no point that has been made against him. He takes up his pension order, and not only justifies it on precedent and merit, but crowds the issue home by challenging the opposition to avow that, in the event of their success, they will revoke it. In the same frank way he deals with the covert attacks on his action in the anthracite coal strike and the Northern Securities merger. Nothing is evaded, nothing extenuated, nothing left in doubt. Every question is faced and the answer is triumphant. In passing from points of criticism to large policies the President is no less direct and even more thorough. The weakness of the opposition on the gold standard is presented with great cogency. They have haltingly acquiesced in the Republican sentiment, but in a government of party nothing is settled if the party of the policy is unsettled. The President's answer to Judge Parker on the trust question knocks out his foundation. Judge Parker said that the common law is the legal remedy. The answer is that "there is no common law of the United States." It has no place in the federal courts. The judicial candidate stumbled even on the law, and when it comes to the record all the facts are with the Administration.

In the protection of American citizens the Administration has made a brilliant showing, and the tables are effectively turned on the critics. The treatment of the tariff question by the President is particularly strong and impressive. His exposition of the solidarity of interests on the part of the farmers and manufacturers is luminous and convincing, and presents the protective policy as the bulwark equally of the agricultural and the industrial elements. The maintenance of this policy is vital, and the success of a party which denounces protection as "robbery" would be a deadly blow at the prosperity of the country. This does not signify that schedules must always remain untouched. Conditions change and laws should be modified to fit new exigencies; but any change should be in harmony with the principle and made by the friends of protection.

The President's letter was written before Judge Parker's speech of last week on government expenditures was made, but it could not have been more complete and crushing reply if it had been written as a direct answer. The charge of extravagance is shown to be unfounded, and it is proved that no essential reduction of expenditure could be made unless the opposition proposed to cut off rural free delivery and other vital public necessities. Finally, the President's discussion of the Philippine question is conceived in the loftiest spirit of true statesmanship and carried out with an eloquence and power which will command the approving judgment of the country. He exposes the inconsistencies, incongruities and dangers of the Democratic proposals, which would plunge the Philippines into anarchy and bring upon us the contempt of the world. He clearly points out the policy of honor, safety and righteousness, and puts the question on the highest plane of national duty and justice. The whole letter is one of remarkable strength and brilliancy, and the President has not only routed his assailants, but he has settled the logic of the campaign.

ROOSEVELT'S LETTER.

Approval Even From a Mugwump Organ.
Springfield Mass., Republican (Mug.).

The President's formal letter of acceptance is of tremendous length; but so is the Bible. Everyone would be repaid by reading it. Mr. Roosevelt has written an able, brilliant and almost dashing paper, which displays him in a fighting yet rather fascinating mood. If we regard the Republican party as a champion automobile, with all the road and speed records, it is easy to conceive of the President as the terrible chauffeur (or the "shover," as Mr. Dooley says) who is driving the devil wagon in a way that bids chickens, baby carriages and Democrats take to the tall grass along the highway. The letter of acceptance is written in the champion automobile style, and it is a question whether anyone ought to get in the way of it.

The President's letter, it may be repeated, is brilliant and slashing; it deserves to be read. Its quality is such that it should put new life into a stagnant campaign.

The Effect of Protection.

Cleveland Marine Review.
To point the moral in a few sentences it may be said that Great Britain has followed the policy of protection on the high seas and free trade on land, while the United States has followed the policy of protection on land and free trade on the high seas. It is interesting to observe that Britain is far and away the leader in the world's carriage of products over sea, while she is now engaged in a very serious attempt to alter her fiscal policy on land. On the other hand, no nation in the world has enjoyed within its own boundaries such unbroken prosperity as has marked the career of the United States, while no nation in the world has sunk so low in business which it transacts upon the seas.

Living in the Midst of Alarms.

Hartford Courant.
This theory that Theodore Roosevelt is a bad and dangerous man is merely a new application of the usual Democratic method. The established Democratic formula for forty years has been to "view with alarm." Sometimes it is this thing that is viewed, and sometimes it is that, but the alarm is constant. This year it is Roosevelt who is so viewed. Lincoln was so viewed in his immortal day. The real question, however, as to how the Democratic party and its candidate of unexpressed opinions would manage the affairs of the United States, remains unchanged.
